"The county attorney is a gentleman," he asserted a little further along in his apology.
"That's more than I can say for you.

was Mr. Hanson's retort.
"Oh, well! That's a matter of opinion and for the public to judge, "added Mr.
Christensen as he switched on to other points in his talk.

CROOKS NOT TOGETHER." Mr. Christensen went on to show by the testimony introduced during the hearing that even the "crooks" were not "together" on any proposition, which in turn was meant to show there could have been no conspiracy. "Chie Sheets is not responsible for Bell's call ing him up. His number, I'll admit i 75 but it is a public phone—any one car use it or call for the number," asserted use it or call for the number," asserted the speaker.

In discussing Parrent's assertion that Bell telephoned to Chief Sheets over a 'bhone standing on a show case in front of Haliday's drug store, the attorney repeated his assertion of yesterday that there is no 'bhone in the front part of the place. Regarding the junk-shop story in which Parrent said Bell paid Sheets money while they were standing near a show case, the speaker said it was remarkable that two men should go into a store and stand inside for several minutes without having some attache of the store come forward to find out what the callers want. "Why didn't the prosecution bring the drug store man here to tell where the 'phones in his store really are?" he asked while closing. "Why didn't they bring the funk-shop man here to corroborate Parrent's testimener."

elosing. Why didn't they bring the funk-shop man here to corroborate Parrent's testimony?"

"There has been no corroborative evidence. We know the court will do its duty and render a just ve, diet no matter where or whom it hits. All we ask is a square deal," he said as he finished. FOR THE COUNTY.

County Atty. Hanson immediately took the floor. "My opponent asks why weren't the conspirators caught?" that's what I ask," began Mr. Hanson. "Chief Sheets and Soreh X. Christenson, and George Raleigh and Sergeant the code of the constant that the constant is a series of the constant the code of the constant is a series of the constant is a series of the constant in the constant is a series of the constant in the constant is a series of the constant in the constant is a series of the constant in the conference rived at the station. The conference rived at the station with Bell and then his a proposition make does not show a presumption it? Of course not? It is eaker sneer of innocence," said the shall and conference of innocence, said the shall and the conference of innocence of innocence, said the shall and the conference of innocence of innocen

PARRENT'S STORY UNSHAKEN.

"Parrent's story stands unshaken against Judge Thurman's onslaughts and Christensen's efforts to discredit it. It has thrown light upon the affair. Parrent has told us how Chief Sheets warned him to be careful and again not to wear such a loud suit. Chief Sheets knows how to handle crooks. Parrent has been promised no immunity; if there was any such arrangement I would know about it. Parrent would not come here and add perjury to his many other crimes.

"We have corroborated every bit of Parrent's testimony. (Here the attorney read an excerpt from a ruling made by Judge Miner on corroboration in the case of Spencer vs Utah. This ruling says corroboration is not necessary upon every detail or material point but on the main story.)

"The chief of police had a part in the conspiracy. It was to get the victims out of the way after his 'pals' had finished his work."

Mr. Hansen concluded his argument at 12 o'clock when the court called a recess until 2 o'clock this afternoon.

They induced him to go back on his confession to place himself in the hands of attorneys not representing him, but three men implicated in the murder of Steunenberg, to place himself in a position where his influence cannot be used against three men, and placed him where, for crimes committed by himself, he is now standing before a jury with his life trembling in the balance."

Hawley took up the statements of the defense made to the jury, and said many of these were entirely outside the record of the case. Referring to the "jumper" which the defense alleged before the jury has been discovered on the remains. Hawley offered to pay $10 for every word referring to the "jumper" that could be produced in the record of the testimony of witnesses, and defled counsel for the defense to contradict him. contradict him and dened course; for the defense to contradict him.

Referring to Darrow's address, he said that it was like a refrain from a street corner Socialist orator. He explained his own connection with the case and that of Gov. Gooding and Senator Borah. He said Adams had made the confession without fear or coercion, and, referring to the confession, where Adams states that it was always understood that he was to get $1,000 for any job he did for the Western Federation, he stated that this would imply that Adams had been engaged in similar work before, and that a man who also was to get $1,000 for the removal of the executive of the state would not hesitate to "bump off" two alleged claim jumpers for $300.

Hawley attacked the alibi of the de-Hawley attacked the alibi of the defense and claimed it was possible for Adams. Mason and Glover to have committed the crime and to have been at Mason's cabin for the birthday dinner. In connection with the supposed ill feeling existing between settlers and claim jumpers. Mr. Hawley pointed out that only Mason and Simpkins haff been interested in any way, while the claim of Russell might have been disputed. These were the men most inclaim of Russell might have been disputed. These were the men most interested in having jumpers removed, and it was only reasonable to suppose that they would be willing to come down here and testify on behealf of the man who had helped them get rid of the jumpers. Again referring to the confession. Hawley pointed out that it had been made by Adams at a time when Adams himself and McParland admitted that there was no charge whatever against Adams, and Adams was aware of it, yer Adams states at the end of the confession that he had made it to save his life.

VARSITY FACTION SPARS FOR TIME

Consolidation Leaders Are Losing Hope of Decisive and Final Victory.

HOLLINGSWORTH AMENDMENT

Senator From Weber is at Work or Plan to Provide a Cache County Regent for University.

While the big consolidation fight is ot on in public today, the lines are being closely drawn about the contestants, and when tomorrow morning's special hearing is given to Park's bills, special hearing is given to Park's bills, it is generally considered that the time for delays will have passed.

Hollingsworth is making more amendments today. One is to the method of appointing the board of regents of the university, so that should the bill become a law it cannot be charged that the Salt Lake board is taking perogatives away from any other part of the state. Hollingsworth is advocating a protection clause requiring the governor to name regents who not only represent different political parties, but reside in different sections of the state. One from Cache is to be required. The extreme consolidationists are not so confident today as they have been. Gardner is said to have gone over to the opposition, and up till today he had been counted among those who favor consolidation. Brinkerhoff on the other hand has become an extreme consolidationist, and is willing to vote for the consolidation bills without the Hollingsworth amendments which allow separate majutenance under one head of worth amendments which allow sep-ate maintenance under one board are maintenance under one hoard of control.

Today was not a good one for getting things done. The coal probing committee of the house and senate met, but was forced to adjourn again as Chairman Robinson of the house was not present. This committee was depended on to furnish a basis for either a maximum rate bill or a revised commission bill, and there now seems to be little prospect of any kind of a report being filed in time for any suggested action to be taken. The legislature today is on its sist day's work, with a possibility of only 60.

The senate committee appointed to investigate the land board did not try to meet, but allowed the day to go past meet, but allowed the day to go pest without a session. Their work is planned to be resumed tomorrow morning, but at that hour there is a senate session to consider Park's consolidation bills, so that a committee meeting will be impossible. Chairman Hulaniski so stated the case today, but said he did not know when the committee could get together. Personally he favored night sessions, he said, as it would afford a chance to get the work done, and in the short remaining period it is best to get all the work possible out of the way.

The most striking confection success of recent years was the introduction of Dutch Chocolates.

Like other fine chocolates, except that they are different. Daintiness and exquisiteness are chief characteristics.

He took her out a box of them And she smilled and then she ate. Said the maid: "No confection Equals the Dutch Chocolate."
